UH West O‘ahu statement regarding air-conditioning

KAPOLEI --- The University of Hawai‘i – West O‘ahu is working diligently to repair its chiller units, which went down yesterday morning due to malfunctioning equipment. Classes are continuing as scheduled, and faculty are encouraged to pursue alternative methods of instructional delivery, utilize distance education capabilities, and modify their class teaching as appropriate to accommodate for the lack of air-conditioning.

All five buildings on campus are affected. The facilities department is working with a mechanical contractor to troubleshoot the problem, and parts are on order and are being flown in from the East Coast. There is no estimate as to the completion of the repair work. UH West O‘ahu is working on measures that are expected to remedy the situation in the interim.
